Word of Invitation

Recently, the importance of child and family policy has been spotlighted as developed countries undergo radical changes in population and family structures, such as dwindling fertility rates, ageing population, diminishing family size, and diversifying family structures.

In this regard, child and family policy researchers from the Department of Social Policy and Intervention, University of Oxford, Korea Institute for Health and Social Affairs (KIHASA), and the Korean Academy of Family Social Work(KAFSW) invite international scholars to the 「Child and Family Policy International Forum」.

This online forum is organized to discuss the challenges of family and child policy and to share goals and recent developments in this field. English/Korean translation will be provided throughout the forum.
